GAS TAX AT HIGHEST POINT - SEVEN TIMES FIRST, 32 YEARS AGO

Following the celebration of our nation's birthday on Monday, Maine motorists can turn to another anniversary this week—one which will observe with considerably less enthusiasm, Thursday (July 7) marks the 32nd birthday of the state gasoline tax.

This was pointed out today by Frank W. Rutter, of Portland, chairman of the Maine Petroleum Industries Committee, who noted that the state gasoline tax, first imposed July 7, 1923, at a rate of 1 cent per gallon, now carries a rate seven times as high and produces 35 times as much revenue as the $22,000 the tax yielded in its first full year.

Rutter declared that with the 1-cent increase that became effective June 1, Maine's present gas tax rate of 7 cents per gallon is equal to the highest in the nation and is 27 to 76 percent higher than any within the New England or Middle Atlantic states.

Pointing out that the state gasoline tax will yield an estimated $17.5 million during 1955 and $18.5 million for a full 12-month period at the 7-cent rate, Rutter said that this 35-fold increase over the 1923 figure is due in part to the fact that the rate is now seven times as high and also that there are now nearly three times as many vehicles in the state.

In addition to the $18.55 million a year Maine highway users now pay in state gasoline taxes, there is also the 2-cent federal gasoline tax, which costs them an additional $5.3 million a year, Rutter said.

He added: "The 9 cent cents per gallon which motorists here pay in combined state and federal taxes on gasoline is equivalent to about 43 percent of the retail price of regular gasoline."

William Richardson and Mrs. Miriam Boyker of Portland have been guests of Mrs. Phillip Faudt and family.

COMMENTS FROM THE OFFICE OF THE TOWN MANAGER

You may be interested to know that Frank Hunt, our Local Director of Civil Defense, recently handed us checks in the amount of $1,520.25 as a part of the reimbursement cost of last year's hurricanes. The major part of this is to be used toward the rebuilding of Meadow Brook Bridge. The forms are up and cement will soon be poured for the abutments of this bridge.

There are still some unpaid 1954 taxes. Prompt attention to this will save the expense of ten-day notices and liens. Thank you.

LIBRARY NOTES - STORY HOUR

A recent book that is exciting argument all over the country is "Why Johnny Can't Read," by Rudolph Flesch.

The author challenges our present method of teaching reading and many parents and educators agree. He says that only in the United States, nowhere else in the literate countries of the world, is there the problem of remedial reading. Until about 30 years ago, when the method of teaching alphabet and the sounds of letters was switched to the word system, we had no problem.

So intense is the interest in this serious condition of children being popular last summer, will be resumed. Beginning the week of July 10, Mrs. Earl Davis will have a story hour at 10 o'clock on Tuesday mornings for all children entering the first and second grades. All first and second graders are welcome.

For the children entering the third and fourth grades here is great good news. Mrs. Arthur Guernsey, a successful teacher who delights in working with children, will have a story hour with them. Ideas from other editors

From the Duncannon Record, Duncannon, Pennsylvania: As I gag through the jokes, the lies and comments on ever and increasing pursuits of happiness, I feel a staggering sense of flitting with fate when I do not subscribe to the method with which the supplicants obtain fulfillment. If, for example, I read that to raise my children in the proper manner, I will allow them a free head of steam and will not raise a wall—or even think about it—upon their tiny little posteriors, I wonder if my father's backhand was also rather wasted, and if my own life has been warped by occasional childlike. For it is in the field of child psychology that the supplicants shine most boldly, have all the best prepared answers and the wildest alarms; prepare the dimmest pictures of the future and the wildest panaceas for the present.

From the Fulton Leader, Fulton, New York: The phrase "juvenile delinquency" is being shouted from the house tops these days and muttered from basement windows. Teachers, police, clergy, editors, politicians, clubs and societies talk and write about it constantly. Violence and lawlessness among young people is said to be growing, and some of the elders are plain scared. . . . There's evil in the world and there always will be, and the struggle is between good and evil. If delinquency is growing it is because of delinquent adults. Pig farmers do not produce silk pocketbooks.

Let's attack delinquency, not only "juvenile" delinquency. We can punish the kids for misbehaving if they know better, but let's be sure that they know better by our example.

From the Elowah News Journal, Atlanta, Alabama: "It doesn't look right somehow—Oh, I see—I've made a little mistake in the pattern—away back there." And the little lady held up the dainty bit of fancywork for her friends' inspection.

"Better make it right before you go on," said the friend.

But the little lady shook her head. "It won't show much. It isn't worth the bother."

Economic Highlights

Happenings That Affect the Future of Every Individual — National and International Problems Inseparable from Local Welfare.

Sylvia Porter, the syndicated financial columnist, writes: "A new 'labor aristocracy' is now emerging in America which has no parallel anywhere. Its founders are the auto workers, its heart lies in Detroit. . . ."

Cause of this dramatic description of course, are the three-year agreements between the CIO auto workers union and Ford and General Motors. The various benefits increase as time goes on—in itself a considerable achievement for the union. Even so, the money gains alone are secondary. The big thing is what the contracts call a supplemental unemployment benefit plan. And this plan, while it falls short of providing a guaranteed annual wage, is a step in that direction. When and if men are laid off, the companies will make cash payments, out of large special funds which, when added to state unemployment compensation, will give the worker 65 per cent of his take-home pay for four weeks for four weeks following the first week, and 60 per cent thereafter up to 25 weeks. Walter Reuther originally asked for much more—80 per cent of take-home for 62 weeks. But he got the GAW principle into the contracts and that is what counts.

Some think this is an evolutionary development—others feel that revolutionary is a more accurate term. Whatever the case, these contracts have no real precedent, and no one can know now just what the effects will be. There are pessimists who feel that they may hold potential seeds of disaster. There are optimists who feel that they will lead to hitherto-unknown stability of employment and production at high levels, and will assure industrial peace. And there are all kinds of in-between views and guesses.

One fear is that the drive to extend the GAW may put companies other than the giants in an extremely difficult position. Sylvia Porter touched on this when she wrote: "Smaller less powerful industries than the automotive industry will be struggling to keep up. Smaller, less powerful companies within the industries will be scrambling to make it—and if they fail, they'll be swallowed up by the giants." Another fear is that companies accepting the GAW will be forced to limit additions to the work force as much as possible, because of the heavy liabilities they assume each time another man joins the payroll. Also, it is widely agreed that the GAW will cause industry to concentrate still more intensely on the development of labor-saving, cost-cutting machines and techniques. And there is a legislative problem involved—only one state, New York, specifically authorizes payment of unemployment insurance along with wages, while in a number of states administrative agencies have said that this would be illegal. Both unions and the managements concerned will now be keenly interested in obtaining whatever changes in laws are required to make the GAW operative.

At any rate a great experiment, full of unknowns, is underway. A view of it expressed by George Shea, writing in the Wall Street Journal, is undoubtedly widely held: "It may bring some unexpected changes as well as some expected ones. For the sake of everyone in the nation, let us hope that business conditions remain favorable long enough to give it a fair test, during which any bugs in it may be repaired before too much harm is done, and during which any benefits it may bring will have time to be recognized."

"Uncle Sam has a boarding house reach when it comes to grabbing tax money. The states get only the leftovers."—Bangor (Maine) News.

The industry weathered this storm in the fashion, is now battling the criticism being leveled against commercials, the very thing that keeps TV going. Memory recall—if you have entered a contest, you know how hard it is to remember a name for a million dollars show, he intends to put in his two weeks about the product that he has to sell, whether or not everybody forgets off to the kitchen for a dish of water.

My first guess with commercials (I do watch them) is that most are too long. My second guess, too many programs, instead of giving a preview of next week's show, are now slipping in a preview of just week's commercial.

I know they are trying to catch some water droplets unprepared—but don't think they are feeling anybody.

THE EVER HOPEFUL DOVE

THE LOW DOWN FROM HICKORY GROVE

The idea seems to be getting around—here and there—regardless of all the ifs and ands of economic discussion, history, and pros and cons—that folding money is here to stay and copious. The New Era theory of 25 years ago where we were permanently—we thought—on a different and higher plane where there was no DOWN to anything, is becoming stylish again—a New Era à la '55 style.

Toward the end of the 20s the Theory of a New Era exploded quite vigorously. It was followed by a theory that much do-re-mi should be laded up and donated to the farmers of the Nation for their not doing things—for not doing too much—for raising less versus more. Then a few years later the "prop" idea hit us—and we guaranteed the grower a bonus above a supply and demand price. We are still at it—as wheat and corn ooze from our pores—plentiful but costly, with a loaf of bread at an all time high.

This little digest of history shows that Theory versus Horse Sense is dynamic. If the ventures now run by the Govt. were sold and turned back to private owners, taxes would roll in from same. Individual taxes would recede—the cost of living could come back to earth levels. Our socialistic theories have back-fired. We better

The sky is one of the best, most flattering natural backgrounds against which to picture your favorite people.

Good Backgrounds Are Natural or Neutral

Of course, your subject is the most important part of a picture—but you can easily ruin the best of subjects by failing to look "behind" them in your viewfinder. The eye can easily skip over a couple of garbage cans and a patterned fence to concentrate on a cute child, but the camera isn't so selective. It will record anything within its field of vision. So, a good background is important.

To give you a quick idea of what we mean by "good" backgrounds, let's just roughly divide them into two broad classifications: neutral and natural. A neutral background is one that makes the subject stand out merely because it itself is completely inconspicuous, adding nothing to the story the picture tells. Plain walls, the sky, a grassy lawn, the sweep of wide open spaces—these are the most common neutral backgrounds.

If you want to take a snapshot that will tell more of a story, try placing the subject against what we call a natural background—one that serves as a stage setting for the action being performed by the person in your picture. A proud fisherman would probably look best against the wooded bank of his favorite stream, the professor at his desk in his book-lined study. The garden would be a natural setting for the attractive young girl carrying a basket of flowers, the home workshop for the "do-it-yourself" weekend carpenter.

Whichever type of background you choose, however, remember that color contrast is important for the best results. Be sure to place light subjects against rather dark backgrounds, and vice versa. You can readily see that a dark green hedge would be a poor background choice for a dark-haired girl in a black dress—but she would certainly be a stand-out against a white garden-gate or a cream-colored convertible!

DALE CARNEGIE

AUTHOR OF "HOW TO STOP WORRYING AND START LIVING"

GERALDINE ALDERSON, 102 Milling Drive, El Dorado, Arkansas, says that when her husband was killed as his car collided with a train their son was two years old and their little daughter only two months. She felt as if the worries of the world had suddenly been put upon her shoulders, and the well meant advice of her friends almost tore her apart.

One afternoon after a particularly trying session with one of these friends she felt as if she was not capable of the job of bringing up her children alone. She went to her room, laid down across the bed and cried until she could cry no more.

Her weeping brought relief to her troubled mind. What is my biggest problem, she asked herself. Shall I stay at home with my children while they are still small, or shall I go to work to make it easier for myself.

She prayed for wisdom and guidance; she counted her blessings and they were many. She says she can't describe the feeling of peace that suddenly came upon her. Her decision was to stay at home and as near as possible give the children a normal home life.

From that day on she began to sleep at night, her health improved and her outlook on life became a happier one.

She says that she knows now that no one is alone; that God is with us.

Theory out of hto Govt. woodshed. JO SERRA

PEOPLE are always asking questions in Washington. Senate committees are constantly probing. Researchers and statisticians are compiling information on everything from beans to the national budget. The new $64 puzzle (replacing the "What happened to the polio vaccine program?") isn't new at all, it's just more puzzling.

The big question, of course, is "What is Russia up to now?" Senators and statesmen on Capitol Hill have greeted one another with this query for years. It's been a real exciting game. Just about the time someone came up with the probable answer, the Kremlin leaders about-faced and veered off in another direction.

Observers who have long regarded Russia's few peaceful gestures as only a feint in preparation for a roundhouse right are asking themselves if German rearmament has caused the change to "sweet-talk" tactics—or if some undercurrent within the Kremlin is building up for a new tidal wave of fierce and oppressive opposition to Free World efforts for peace.

Past events have shown that any softness of Kremlin policy, went before or immediately followed some head-rolling. The last bounce was given to Stalin's successor, Premier Georgi Malenkov, February 6. After Malenkov, as sour and stubborn, the Kremlin policy became softer instead of tougher and the recent show of friendliness and cooperation has apparently touched off no new explosions behind the Iron Curtain.

It appears on the surface then, that the Kremlin has realized the impossibility of keeping the Western Allies unarmed and West Germany neutralized. They lost any hope for this when Stalin's tough policy allowed the Korean War to shove the West into a stronger alliance with Germany being permitted to rearm and join the partnership.

Most observers believe Malenkov lost only because of a fierce struggle for power, but it might be that the Russians realized a new face would have to come forth with any new tactics. Losing with Stalin's tactics, and making no greater headway with Malenkov, the Kremlin has now put into the limelight two more "attractive" leaders. Premier Nikolai Bulganin, with his velvety beard, looks as much like a musician as a politician. Nikita Krushchev, credited with being the "boss", can bubble with enthusiasm and good-will, as he did when he visited Yugoslavia.

It could be that the Kremlin has at last decided that threats and dire warnings became obsolete and outmoded when the Allies quit squabbling among themselves and let the Germans have arms again.

The change in the Russian attitude became more and more apparent after December 30 when the French Chamber of Deputies voted for German independence and rearmament.

This is not the first "new face" the Kremlin has shown to the Free World and it should not be taken as indication that their apparent show of cooperation and friendliness, or any willingness to "talk things over", will close the gap between Communism and the rest of the world.

Twin Pipes that play sweet music!

Chevrolet's "Super Turbo-Fire V8" with 180 hp.

You can spot this one by the twin tail-pipes. No matter what you drive, you're going to see twin-exhaust Chevrolets pulling away—in traffic, on the toughest hills, on the long straightaways.

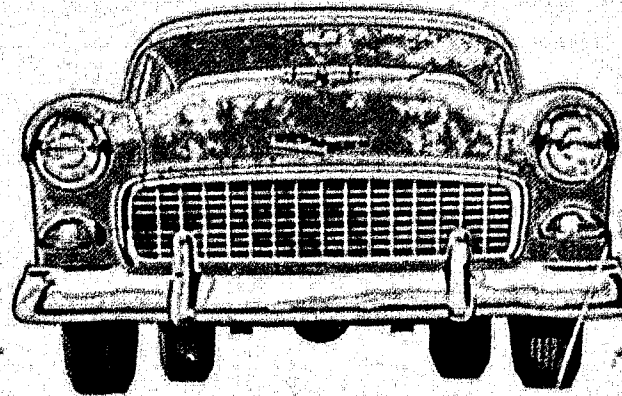

... Unless you have a "Super Turbo-Fire V8" of your own. And then you'll know what it's like to pilot the car that sets the pace for everything else—and doesn't pause to read the price tag!

What makes the Super so fast? Chevrolet's superb valve-in-head V8, with the shortest stroke in the industry, the most power per pound, and the only 12-volt electrical system in its field—all this plus a four-barrel carburetor and free-breathing twin exhausts.

Want to sample this silk-lined cyclone? Just give us a call, any day this week, and we'll be proud to show you just how hot a V8 can be.

*Optional at extra cost.
†Station wagon models have single exhaust pipes.

Read II Corinthians 5:17-21
 Ye must be born again. (John 3:17)
 THE most remarkable fact about Jesus' insistence that we must be born again is His assurance that we can be born again. It means new life. We can start all over again.

We have often been told that humanity is waiting for a revolutionary Christianity which will say that the world is evil and then change it. The school, the home, and even the church must be made over. All these must be redeemed by the spirit and power of Christ.

We need the kind of self-surrender, of new birth, that quickens the conscience, opens the heart to God's love, and leads the will to the purpose of God. None of these results will follow unless individuals gives their hearts—that is, their love and loyalty—to God. Only God can change man in any deep, radical sense. We do not decide to change our personality and then, with the wave of a wand, presto, change it. We give God the chance to possess us and use us.

Prayer

Father, we have too long followed the warped desires of our undisciplined minds and hearts. In our best moments we want to follow the way of Christ. Change us into His likeness by giving Thy direction and love this day. In His name. Amen.

Though for the Day
 God is able to do what I cannot do for myself; I yield myself to Him.

CREDENTIALS FOR A COP

By Maurice Vincent

LOOKING across the barren squad room with the solitary light bulb hanging from the ceiling, Walter Detrick could see Mulrooney muttering over an arrest sheet. The big cop had just broken his third pencil.

"Don't make 'em as strong as they usta," grumbled Mulrooney. He tossed the fragments of the pencil across the room. Walter grinned. It reminded him of the day he and Mulrooney had been hired, years ago.

Walter had looked at himself in the mirror that morning and figured he hadn't a chance of being hired as a cop. "I'm such a little runt," he muttered.

"Wear the best suit, honey," his wife told him.

He had felt his confidence oozing down into his shoes as he walked up the worn stone steps of the City Hall. The desk sergeant gave him a hard stare and pointed an indifferent finger down the hall where the final interviews were being held.

"Come in, Detrick," said the Chief. Walter walked uncertainly into the big smoke filled room and took a straight backed chair along the wall. He tried to look as though he belonged there. The Chief was worried about the tough kids in frontown; breaking and entering and doing general mischief. The situation was getting out of hand. The Chief was doing something about it—he was hiring cops.

"Gotta 'nother pencil, Chief?" asked the big man who was trying to fill out his papers. He held a broken pencil in one big paw.

The Chief took the pencil and looked at the big man.

"Don't make 'em as strong as they usta," said the Chief with a short laugh. The rest of the men in the room laughed loudly.

The Chief tossed the broken pencil in the wastebasket and the action seemed to help him make up his mind. "All you fellows can go with the exception of Rogers, Able, and Mulrooney," he said. Then he hesitated.

Walter started for the door. That was that. He wondered what he would tell his wife.

"Detrick!" said the Chief.

"Yes, sir," said Walter.

"You stay," said the Chief. The upshot of the interview was that Walter was hired. After a few minutes of questioning the Chief made Detrick a cop and he'd been a cop ever since. But most of his work had been with boys. He had always prided himself that he had done a good job even though he had never been tough like the rest of the men on the force.

Later, Walter asked, "How come you picked me, Chief?"

"I needed big, tough guys like Mulrooney and the other two and they've made fine cops for me," said the Chief slowly.

"But I needed another type and I figured you were it," he continued.

"How come?" persisted Walter.

"Knew you wouldn't be hard on pencils," the Chief said slowly.

Then the Chief looked serious. "We had a problem in those days with tough kids—same problem to day to a certain extent—I knew you liked boys."

"You know I liked boys," Walter asked.

"I could see through you, Walter," answered the Chief blandly.

"Oh?"

"Remember that fancy silk shirt you wore, you old dude? Well, I saw right through it—right on through to that undershirt you were wearing. Know what was on that undershirt, Officer Detrick?"

"It . . ."

The Chief laughed loudly and his laugh rang through the barren halls of the Police Station.

"Remember — Sunnyside Boy's Camp!" howled the Chief.

Conservation Farming in Oxford County

by Douglas L. Marston
Soil Conservation Service

The Northern New England Chapter of the Soil Conservation Society of America met last week at the Christmas Tree Inn in Bridgton. It was the first summer meeting of the Chapter, but we hope it will be an annual event. A tour of Bob Dineen's woodlot was held Friday afternoon and a banquet followed Friday evening. Saturday morning there was a tour of Jim Chadbourne's Farm at North Bridgton. It was a very interesting meeting and well attended by those interested in soil conservation from the southern part of the State.

I was at the W. H. Allen farm in Hebron last week and they are just about finished clearing on a 20-acre field that was recently purchased. This was an old grown-up orchard with pine and gray birch 15-20 feet tall. A bulldozer with a rake type blade was used to do the clearing and Mr. Allen certainly has a fine field that is badly needed for grass.

I was also at the Western Maine sanatorium farm in Hebron and Mr. Damon, the farm Superintendent, plans to construct a pond for livestock water in the near future.

Plans for the Oxford County Field Day at the Barrows Farm in Oxford are coming along well and we hope that all you folks will plan to be there. Jerro Haecker, of Norway High School Vocational Agriculture was in last week and said that he is making plans for a tractor driving contest between the three Vocational Agricultural Schools here in the county. It should be an interesting program for all, so let's plan to be at the Barrows Farm in Oxford on August 16.

UPTON

— Mrs. C. A. Jenkins, Corres. —
On Sunday evening July 3rd about forty residents and summer people gathered at the Grange Hall to discuss matters of mutual interest. The subject of spraying the town for bugs seemed to be the chief topic of conversation. One summer resident complained that the State Highway crew, while building the road on Mill Street last year had dug a ditch running the waste water onto his land and thereby ruining it to a certain extent. A committee of five—namely, Charles Heywood, Cecil Cripe, Fred Jenkins, Raymond Hutchins and Mrs. Merna Allen—were elected to go ahead and make further plans for another meeting and for organizing.

The holiday week end brought in many people from out of town to their camps or summer homes, among whom are: James Yarnell and son of Underhill, Vt.; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Tucker and sons of Dover, Mass.; Mr. and Mrs. H. Prescott Tucker of Dover, Mass.; Ray D. Thompson of Natick, Mass.; Mrs. Eva Lawrence and Mrs. Thelma Brown, Bath; Mr. and Mrs. Olat Nelson and family of Berlin, N. H.; Mr. and Mrs. Freddie Mason and family of Berlin, N. H., and many others from Berlin, N. H.; Mr. and Mrs. Guy Pratt of Bethel and granddaughter, Calie Tucker.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Heywood have returned to their summer home after spending about a month with their daughter in Vermont. Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Swan and two children of Locke Mills were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fred S. Jenkins.

Kendrick Jenkins was home from Littleton, N. H., over the week end.

The "Dump on the Hump" restaurant did a rushing business over the week end.

Mrs. Merna Allen is entertaining relatives from Andover.

Mrs. Durkee has many guests at the Lake House. She has rented what is known as the "Winter House" to Mr. and Mrs. Zanelli for the season.

Warren Blake began work on a cellar for a house on Tyler St. Hunt's Circus presented a pleasing performance in Bethel. Fifty children were attending the Daily Vacation School. Death: Miss Elvira Holt, Mrs. Eva B. Hastings, John C. Wood.

50 YEARS AGO

A special group meeting of ministers of the Methodist Church from this section of the State was held at the Methodist Church. The fire department was called for the first time for a year. The blaze was at the N. & Stowell Co. mill and was quickly extinguished. The "night before" the Fourth was the noisiest for some years. Death: Kenneth L. Swallow, Mrs. Deborah Swan, Mrs. Lauretta M. Valentine.

"I REMEMBER" BY THE OLDTIMERS

From Mrs. Rudolph Hendrickson Hegewisch, Chicago, Illinois: I remember about 60 years ago we were a family of nine children. My father had pay day once a week and the 6 younger children got to buy lunch bags; 6 bags for a nickel. They contained pink popcorn, a gum drop or two and a little prize. We were sure happy for pay day. And, if we ran an errand and got two cents, we felt well paid indeed.

I was third from the oldest and before going to school had to sweep and fix the beds for my two older sisters were out working. On Monday afternoons, it was scrub the clothes; on Fridays, about the ironing while Mother baked about 12 loaves of bread in a coal or wood stove, so as to use the same heat in the summer.

After we got older, and had boy friends, we would take a walk around on the board walks, sometimes he would spend the day for a bag of candy, and once in a long while, take us for a buggy ride. This was seldom since you had to hire the horse and buggy.

Father had a horse and a big wagon and sometimes took us to visit friends and stay overnight, though it was only eight miles away. The wagon had two long seats on the side and we called it the "express."

From Mrs. Rhodes Ingerton, Center, Texas: I remember when I used to try to explain to my children about the carpets which were woven on a big hand loom when I was a child. I might as well have spoken to them in a foreign language, as they couldn't understand how anyone would be interested in weaving a carpet, but I'm sure there are many old-timers who remember this almost forgotten art.

My grandmother built one big room especially for the hand loom which was so huge, with its old-fashioned carpet warp harness and four tall posts it almost filled the room. At one end of the room was a big open fireplace. We sat for hours on cold days and fire rags just the right width to fit the loom and when grandmother was positive we had enough balls of yarn rags to weave a carpet, the big moment came. We took turns, at weaving. Until your turn came, you had to wind the yarn rags on the bobbins, randomly waiting until you could crawl up on a bench and start treadling, throwing your shuttle and beating the big beam to tighten the filling. The constant clatter of the shuttles and beat of the beam was deafening and it was pleasing to stop over so often and observe the tall yet were weaving.

Certainly one could not weave a carpet in a day, it took weeks. Yet we enjoyed every minute. Grandmother's eye prepared our meals around the open fireplace. We sat on a bench, just outside the door, and when the sun came out, we sat on the porch and watched the birds fly.

When it is too hot for us to sit on the porch, we have large windows and we have a "breezeway" (a breezeway is a place where the wind comes from the sea, blowing in from the sea).

BORN June 18 to Mr. J. E. and Mrs. E. L. Smith, a daughter, Mary E. Smith.

MARRIED In Albany, July 2, by William Brown, Justice of the Peace, Edward C. Jackson, of Albany, and Jennie Mayberry.

DIED In Humford, July 1, Mrs. Elsie A. King of Bryant Pond, aged 75 years. In Bethel, July 3, Mrs. Tena M. Thurston, aged 65 years. In Lewiston, July 4, Catherine W. Beck of Norway, aged 65 years.

Bethel won its fourth game of the season Wednesday evening, as against three defeats, when Howie Rolfe checked a neat two-hitter at the Locke Mills pastime.

Bud Lamson and Howie Rolfe paced the Bethel offense with two hits apiece. Hank Bowers and Dick Trimback garnered the only safe blows from Rolfe's southpaw slants.

When you are walking in the road at night, you may be able to see the headlights of a car approaching you, but that doesn't mean that the driver can see you. Some motorists overcome this disadvantage by carrying a flashlight, but your best protection is to stay out of the path of approaching cars. Never edge out into the street under the assumption that drivers will notice you. You could be fatally mistaken.

Braves — In the past two weeks the Braves have played five games, losing four and winning one. These boys, should receive praises from all, for they have shown the good sportsmanship and the spirit of good clean baseball. They will give a good account of themselves before the season's over. Let's give them our support. — Bryant Pond vs. Bethel Braves at Bryant Pond, Thursday, July 7, 6:30 p. m.

Red Sox — Having lost five games in a row the Red Sox are looking for their first win. These boys have veterans and good substitutes enough to be up in the winner's circle. So keep your eyes on the Red Sox. — Bethel Red Sox vs. Nor-Patrol Four — We all enjoyed a very successful eight day camping trip. This year we went to "Clinton Lodge" on Long Lake, Harrison. We all feel very well repaid for all the work we did in order to earn money for this trip. While at camp curved bar pins were presented to the following girls: Nikki McMillin, Lorenda Freeman, Linda Brown, Dixie Brown, Jean Waterhouse and Barbara. The curved bar is the highest rank in the intermediate program. When the Curved Bar is worn it shows you are a First Class Scout plus. The girls have worked very hard for this rank and we do feel very proud to be able to wear these pins.

Hillsboro, Ore. Argus: "Government, whether it be federal, state or county, should stay out of business.... Loss by private business is a loss to government because there is no money with which to pay taxes. In many instances it uses taxpayer money with which to compete with private business as for example in printing, thus cutting its nose to spite its face by hurting a segment of business and reducing taxable income."
